The Dobro is an American instrument that became a staple in bluegrass music after its introduction by Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs in the 1950's

Today, the Dobro III design by MossCreek follows in it's namesake's footsteps by creating a relaxed farmhouse exterior, while offering a layout suited for modern living.

Perfectly suited for a sloping lot, the Dobro III is a Main and Lower Level home that maximizes space and budget.

The main level interior features a vaulted great room ceiling, open plan living, walk-in pantry, master suite, and connected laundry and mud rooms. The gracious screened porch is complete with an outdoor kitchen.

On the lower level, the Dobro provides three guest bedroom suites, a family den, and kitchenette.
